ANCIENTS AND MODERNS MINGLE AT THE ELKS' MAMMOTH CHARITY BALL

Cleopatra, Roman Gladiators and the Suffragette of the Present Era Are on Hand to Dance Out the Old and in the New — Queen Liliuokalani and Governor Pinkham Are Interested Spectators

MRS. CHARLES F. CHILLINGWORTH AWARDS PRESENTS

SPECULATE ON RECEIPTS.

Elks are today speculating on the amount of money received as proceeds from the charity masquerade given by them last night at the Armory building. Up to this time they have found it impossible to make an accurate estimate of the sum they will have to distribute to the various charitable institutions of the territory. The larger number of the tickets were sold by members of the Elks individually and until the returns from these sales are known they say it will be impossible to give an accurate estimate. E. A. Douthitt said this morning that so far the receipts which are in for the boxes and the tickets sold at the door last night. From the former $450.50 was realized, from the latter $500. This does not include the $110 paid at auction for the governor's invitation and the $135 for the queen's invitation. Mr. Douthitt said that it is probable that they would not more than break even on the costumes rented and the dinner served at the Armory. He said it was impossible at this time to estimate the amount of the proceeds. The attendance is estimated by Mr. Douthitt at about 2000.

Costumes of a king and queen, of shepherds and dancers of the desert of Egypt, costumes of the uncertainly named, Romans and officers of Louis XIII., costumes of striped-suited convicts, of policemen and of suffragettes were prominent last night at the Elks' masquerade ball given at the new armory. In these and a score more different costumes, society appeared and danced, happily, while the hands of the clock slowly made their way to the witching hour; and then on, past that time, on the brink of a new year, society danced. Until 2 o'clock this morning, Honolulu's society folk were in costume. From above, in her box, Queen Liliuokalani watched the dance, from the beautiful grand march with the brilliant moving colors, until after the toast-songs had been sung to the absent Elks. On the other side of the balcony was Governor Pinkham with a few friends in a beautifully decorated box, and behind him, in the diamond horseshoe, were a few score persons prominent in social circles here. Until a late hour the boxes remained filled, and after the unmasking at 11:20 o'clock many of them danced until the final waltz. Such a masquerade as that seen last night has seldom, if ever, been witnessed in Honolulu. The great floor, sufficient in size for a thousand to dance easily, was needed to accommodate the large number who appeared in costumes and masks. In the grand march, which began shortly after 10 o'clock, there were at least 500 persons, who marched behind the king and queen of the ball, Dr. George Herbert and Mrs. Charles F. Chillingworth, their pages and maids, circling about the great hall, until the royal couple were bowed to their throne. There in the attendance of the pages and maids, the king and queen remained. Jewels in their crowns flashed in the soft lights. Miss Helen Spalding, Miss Myrtle Schuman, Miss Ruth Anderson and Miss Pauline Schaefer were the maids. They were dressed in charming gowns. Near them, on the steps of the throne, sat the four little pages in white and gold costumes. The pages were Masters J. Broderick, Bryant Cooper, E. Campbell and Raymond Scudder. The four jesters were James A. Wilder, with his cap and bells, and tiny red and green balloons on a cane, he made the royal party smile and laugh at will at his jokes and capers. He was a jester of no little merit, of no little mirth. So varied were the costumes, so lavish, so exact, in detail that the award of prizes, which was made by the queen of the ball on the decision of judges and announced by C. D. Wright, was not easy to make. The perfect artistic sense shown in some of them, in others the creative or original made the matter of prize distribution what a lawyer would call a "knotty problem" — meaning that it was difficult. The decisions were made before midnight. Mrs. Cad Bowles, in a green Oriental costume, and Mrs. Hartley in a beautiful costume of colors, divided the first prize, and Mrs. Harry Brookes of Vancouver was given the second. Mrs. Brookes wore a fascinating Egyptian princess gown, of silver and pearls and light silks. D. W. Douthitt of the vaudeville committee secured three hula dancers and a gourd-beater, and twice during the evening they gave exhibitions of the Hawaiian dance. They were exceptionally clever dancers, and this unexpected feature of the program was warmly applauded. Just as the clock touched the hour before midnight, the toast songs to departed Elks were sung. The great multi-costumed assemblage was gathered at the music and of the hall by the throne while the songs were sung "to our absent brothers." Later in the evening the gold-engraved invitation cards sent to Queen Liliuokalani and Governor Pinkham were put up for sale. Mrs. S. C. Allen buying the former for $125, and several Elks clubbing together and buying the governor's at $110 — an unscheduled addition to the charity fund. In the box with the queen was Prince and Princess Kalaniana'ole and Mr. and Mrs. Dennis. In the box with the governor were Judge and Mrs. A. A. Wilder, Mr. and Mrs. F. Klamp, Miss Ben Taylor and Dr. and Mrs. Cooper. The governor was one of the most interested spectators, and though he seldom if ever during the evening left his box, few incidents in the play below missed his eye. The ball was in every way a success. The costumes, the place, the military band's music, the decorations, the vaudeville features, and all, could
